

essential for encouraging the promotion and adoption of insurance products by small-scale sugarcane growers. Therefore, it is recommended that the government should use the existing extension officers to educate farmers about the importance and benefits of insurance products.

References

- Food and Agricultural Organisation (2016). Available online: <http://faostat3.fao.org/home/E>
- Hughes C (2006). Quantitative and qualitative approaches to social research. University of Warwick. Available online: <https://www.scribd.com/document/135552364/Quantitative-and-Qualitative-Approaches>
- Mbonane ND (2018). An analysis of farmers' preferences for crop insurance: a case of maize farmers in Swaziland. University of Pretoria MSc (Agric) Dissertation. Available online: <https://repository.up.ac.za/handle/2263/67801>
- Mdletshe STC (2014). Assessment of the performance of smallholder irrigated sugarcane farming in Maphumulo municipality of KwaZulu-Natal Province. University of Fort Hare MSc (Agric) Dissertation. Available online: <http://libdspace.ufh.ac.za/handle/20.500.11837/401>
- South African Sugar Association (2019). An overview of the South African Sugar Industry
- Zulu NS, Sibanda M and Tlali BS (2019). Factors affecting sugarcane production by small-scale growers in the Ndwedwe Local Municipality, South Africa. Agriculture 9(8): 170.