

Dr Sarah Mdletshe is a Research Scientist at the South African Institute for Plant Studies and Honorary Professor in the School of Biology at the University of Kibimbi. She received training in Nigeria, Argentina and South Africa in the fields of botany and molecular biology and worked in university teaching and research for 12 years before joining SAIPS in 2005. Dr Mdletshe has authored 4 research publications in international journals and has supervised/co-supervised 5 MSc and 1 PhD graduate. She chairs the Committee of Concerned Biologists on Climate Change.